Video Poetry For Deaf & Hearing

In 1978, Todd S.J. Lawson, the new director of San Francisco Arts & Letters, a resident group at Fort Mason, began the first "Video Poetry for the Deaf" program in the Bay Area. Since then, the program, which was highlighted last Spring at the Bay Area Small Press Bookfair, has expanded and treated hundreds to live poetry readings, interviews with celebrities in the arts, appeared on television and generally been met with a highly enthusiastic response.

On September 27, (Sat) at 7:30pm, Lawson will be joined by poet Emanuel Ro for the premiere of a regularly scheduled series which will include an interpreter for the hearing-impaired and will be video-taped before a live audience. Each month new guest poets, writers & celebrities will join this fascinating program which includes video clips of interviews with people such as Eric Hoffer, Scott Beach, Willie Brown, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Cyril Magnin, Margo St. James, etc. (2nd floor, Bldg. D, 7:30pm, $3 donation, $1 for seniors, high school students, fixed incomes.) Don't miss this unusual event.

Zen Center's Information Books

The Whole Earth Household Store & Zen Center in cooperation with the Whole Earth Catalog will open for one year in the ground floor of Building D, Fort Mason Center, an experimental retail bookstore to be called Information Books. The core of the books carried will be those reviewed in the "CoEvolution Quarterly" and in the Next Whole Earth Catalog which will be published in October of this year by Random House.

In addition Information Books will carry titles reflecting the actitivies and interests of the Fort mason residents and programs. Hopefully, Information Books will open in September in time for the 1980 Exhibition of the People's Republic of China with representative books on Asia.

Information Books would like your suggestions for titles that should be carried and subject areas that should be developed. Please call the Whole Earth Household Store at 441-7250.

Academy of Media & Theatre Arts

This newly created Theatre School for young people, put together by the former staff of ACT's Young Conservatory, under the direction of Candace Barrett, brings to Fort Mason Center another facet of the Centers growing involvement with theatre.

AMATA will offer on-going classes in all phases of radio, video, film & theatre production & performance for young people between the ages of 12 & 18.

Applications are being accepted now through Sept. 20th by contacting Candace Barrett at 441-5706.

This unique youth-oriented program offers a space where young people may receive exposure to professionally oriented experimental media & theatre. Participants will be able to integrate training in live & media performances and production with opportunities to work on the scripting, producing, behind-the-scenes as well as performing elements of full-scale radio, video, film & live theatre productions for young audiences.

Classes begin Sept. 29 in Bldg. C, 3rd Floor.

Recently resigned Fort Mason Director, Ron Caya has accepted the directorship of the Scottsdale, Arizona Performing Arts Center.
